THOMAS MURRAY SWINGS INTO ACTION

Two of the most respected consultants in the market, Simon Thomas and Simon Murray, have launched their own business. Thomas Murray Ltd. will specialise in the securities and investment services industry, offering research based consultancy.

Both Thomas and Murray come from DIBC, the specialist financial services consultancy run by Steven Davis, and it is understood that the new venture has the blessing of DIBC. Global securities services customers have transferred to the new company, along with all the relevant research data. The Global Securities Services

Forum, which is doing useful work in defining the role and responsibilities of custodians in the investment management chain, will continue to be convened by Thomas. Thomas describes the new company as focussing on the strategic end of the business, targeting custodians, banks, asset managers, institutional investors and broker/dealers. In addition to consultancy, Thomas Murray will offer market research services, which they believe will set them apart from other providers.
